The California Range of Hot Tubs are rotationally moulded, a manufacturing process that uses less material & labour than traditional acrylic hot tubs. This method creates an incredibly durable unibody / one-piece shell, eliminating the need for an internal support frame and allowing us to provide a premium hot tub experience at the most affordable price point.

Engineered to give you maximum performance California Range hot tubs require less energy to maintain than soft tubs as each spa is fully insulated for optimal heat retention.

Indoor Infrared Sauna

A traditional sauna transfers heat by circulating hot air, meaning very high air temperatures are required to heat the body. In an infrared sauna the far infrared heat rays warm your body directly. This allows a penetrating heat at a more pleasant temperature of 110 - 150°F / 43 - 66°C, providing more health benefits and a more enjoyable and comfortable environment.

A typical conventional sauna requires a power supply of up to 7kw and requires an electrician to install. Our largest far infrared sauna needs only a power supply capable of delivering 2.4kw and can be run directly from a 3 pin socket. Because there is no steam no venting is required and the infrared sauna cannot cause condensation or damp.
